EntryVIEW: Facility Access Control Software & Systems

EntryVIEW is a web-based access control application that can be served on a network or across the internet. The software allows you to configure the doors in your facilities to control employee and visitor access. You have the ability to control and document the door admittance of all employees. The system can restrict users from buildings or rooms to which they should not have access.

Your security guards will have the proper tools to keep your facilities safe with real time monitoring of all access points. Visitors and vendors can be granted access to specific areas only, along with records of their movement. Alarms can be set to automatically sound if a door is left open or is forced open.

The system can be used independently or integrated with other Acumen products.

A complete facility access control system is comprised of both software and several types of hardware. Acumen offers several options for hardware - for instance, many employee time clocks can be used as facility access control devices. Employee time clocks, proximity devices, swipe card devices, and other devices can be used to control access at each door.

A Physical Access Controller collects data, maintains information regarding which facilities or rooms an employee should have access, and locks and unlocks doors. The Physical Access Controller is typically housed in a secure location such as a server room or another locked location. Finally, an electronically-controlled lock is secured to the physical door to either grant or restrict access.
